

The NEPA “Umbrella”

The Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) and Federal Transit Administration (FTA) manage project development and decision-making in a coordinated process that complies with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) as well as dozens of other laws and regulations. An informal way of describing this coordinated approach is to say that the various requirements are met under the “NEPA umbrella.” This term is used by FHWA and other agencies but is not found in Federal regulations.

When the Colorado Department of Transportation prepares NEPA documents for Federal transportation projects, it also addresses both Federal and Colorado requirements under the NEPA umbrella.

The NEPA “Umbrella”

The Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) and Federal Transit Administration (FTA) manage project development and decision-making in a coordinated process that complies with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) as well as dozens of other laws and regulations. An informal way of describing this coordinated approach is to say that the various requirements are met under the “NEPA umbrella.” This term is used by FHWA and other agencies but is not found in Federal regulations.

When the Colorado Department of Transportation prepares NEPA documents for Federal transportation projects, it also addresses both Federal and Colorado requirements under the NEPA umbrella.

The NEPA “Umbrella”

The Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) and Federal Transit Administration (FTA) manage project development and decision-making in a coordinated process that complies with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) as well as dozens of other laws and regulations. An informal way of describing this coordinated approach is to say that the various requirements are met under the “NEPA umbrella.” This term is used by FHWA and other agencies but is not found in Federal regulations.

When the Colorado Department of Transportation prepares NEPA documents for Federal transportation projects, it also addresses both Federal and Colorado requirements under the NEPA umbrella.

The NEPA “Umbrella”

The Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) and Federal Transit Administration (FTA) manage project development and decision-making in a coordinated process that complies with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) as well as dozens of other laws and regulations. An informal way of describing this coordinated approach is to say that the various requirements are met under the “NEPA umbrella.” This term is used by FHWA and other agencies but is not found in Federal regulations.

When the Colorado Department of Transportation prepares NEPA documents for Federal transportation projects, it also addresses both Federal and Colorado requirements under the NEPA umbrella.

